PREFACE.

MANY teachers have expressed a desire for more Italian exercises to be used with my little Grammar; others have asked for a practical and easy course in the rudiments of the language. Italian Composition is intended to meet both these requirements; and I hope that the Grammar and the Composition combined may unite the advantages of a logically arranged reference book with those of a "working grammar."

Part I contains, in the form of references to my Grammar, a course of twenty lessons in the elementary principles of the language, and twenty exercises illustrating them. Part II comprises fifteen paragraphs of simple Italian, each of which is followed by an exercise based upon it. Part III consists of fifteen additional exercises in composition, and a number of formulas used in letter-writing. The vocabularies should give all the necessary words that are not furnished elsewhere. It is supposed that, before beginning Part II, pupils will review the whole Grammar, learning the portions omitted in the first course, and writing all the composition exercises contained in that book. It is taken for granted, also, that the reading of Italian will begin very early and will be continued through the year.

ITALIAN COMPOSITION.

PRONUNCIATION.

1. The Italian alphabet has the same letters as the English, except that k, w, x, and y do not occur in modern Italian.

2. The Italians distinguish seven vowels: a, close e, open e, i, close o, open o, u; each of which always has the same sound, no matter what may be its position in the word, and never tends, as do the English long vowels, to become a diphthong. Italian vowels are all pronounced very quickly; hence there is but little difference in quantity between accented and unaccented sounds. English-speaking students must carefully avoid drawling the accented and slighting the unaccented syllables; they should try to give to every Italian vowel about the length of i in "bitter."

A is nearly like a in "father": as fava, canna, cassa, palla.

E, close, is nearly like a in "fate": as beve, vere, stelle, messe.

E, open, may be formed by trying to pronounce e in "bell" with the mouth very wide open: as bella, amena, fera, pensa.

I is nearly like ee in "feet": as miri, vini, fissi, spilli.

O, close, is nearly like o in "mope": as dopo, dove, bollo, sotto.

O, open, is nearly like aw in "saw" pronounced with the mouth wide open: as no, odi, poi, donna.

U is nearly like oo in "boot": as una, cura, nulla, ruppi.

a. The letters i and u are sometimes used to represent consonant sounds (see 4); but in formulating rules they are always counted as vowels.

3. As close and open vowels are not distinguished in spelling, some rules are necessary:—

(1) Unaccented e and o are always close: as mare, "sea"; amo, "I love."

(2) E and o are close in all monosyllables* ending in a consonant: as con, "with"; non, "not"; per, "for."

(3) In monosyllables* and oxytones† ending in a vowel, final e is close, final o is open: as che, "what"; me, "me"; re, "king"; credè, "he believed"; perchè, "why"; do, "I give"; Po, "Po"; sarò, "I shall be"; andò, "he went." Exceptions: final e is open in è = "is," re = "re," interjections (as aimè, "alas"; chè, "nonsense"), proper names (as Noè, "Noah"), and foreign words (as caffè, "coffee"); final o is close in lo and o.

(4) Accented e and o are always open in the groups ie and uo: as piede, "foot"; fuoco, "fire." E and o standing for ie and uo are open: as ven = viene, "he comes"; cor = cuore, "heart."

* Not including shortened forms of words that regularly have more than one syllable.

† Words accented on the last syllable.

(5) In words that have always formed a part of the spoken language, accented e is nearly always close when it represents Latin ē or ĕ, open when it represents Latin ē or æ; accented o is nearly always close when it represents Latin ō or ŭ, open when it represents Latin ō or au. In book words accented e and o are usually open.

In all cases not covered by the first three rules, the quality of e and o will be marked in this book, an acute accent (´) denoting the close, a circumflex (^) the open sound: as avére, "to have"; méno, "less"; tiêne, "he holds"; liêto, "happy"; poêta, "poet"; óra, "hour"; mólto, "much"; buôno, "good"; pôco, "little"; môto, "motion."

4. B, f, m, p, q, v are pronounced as in English.

C before e or i sounds like ch in "chin"; elsewhere it is always like English k: as cima, "top"; cóme, "how"; dólce, "sweet." G before e or i sounds like g in "gem"; elsewhere it is always like g in "go": as gatto, "cat"; gênte, "people"; spingi, "push."

a. A cc or a gg before e or i has merely the sound of ch in "chin" or g in "gem" prolonged: as facce, "faces"; lègge, "law."

D, l, n, t are pronounced further forward in the mouth than in English; the tip of the tongue should touch the back of the upper front teeth: as alto, "high"; dato, "given"; luna, "moon"; nudo, "naked"; tuôno, "thunder."

H is always silent: as ahi, "oh!" ha, "he has."

I, unaccented, before a vowel, sounds like English y: as iêri, "yesterday"; paio, "pair"; più, "more." In the groups cia, cio, ciu, gia, gio, giu, an unaccented i serves only to show that the c or g is soft: as faccia,

"face"; guancia, "cheek"; ciò, "that"; giù, "down"; mangia, "eat"; raggio, "ray."

J is merely another way of writing i.

N before a q or a hard c or g has the sound of English ng: as banca (bang-ka), "bank"; dunque (dung-kwe), "therefore"; lungo (lung-go), "long."

R is always rolled, the point of the tongue vibrating against the teeth: as caro, "dear"; rosso, "red"; per, "for." When r is double or followed by a consonant, the trill is prolonged: as carro, "cart"; burro, "butter"; marrone, "chestnut"; carne, "meat"; pôrta, "door."

S is generally pronounced nearly like English s in "see," but with a somewhat sharper sound: as sô, "I know"; spillo, "pin."

Initial s before a sonant (b, d, g, l, m, n, r, v) has a sound intermediate between s and English z: as sdrucchiolare, "to slip"; slitta, "sleigh."

A single s between vowels has, in most words, the sound of English z: as caso, "case"; câusa, "cause"; viso, "face." But in the following cases it is pronounced like s in "see," "mason": —

a. In ásino, casa, Chiusi, côsa, così, desidêrio, naso, parasito, pêso, Pisa, pisello, pôsa, ripôso, riso, susina, and their derivatives, and in many uncommon words.

b. After the prefixes de-, di-,* pre-, pro-, re-, ri-, *tra-: as desistere, disegno, presumere, proseguire, reservare, risolvere, trasudare.

c. In the adjective ending -oso and the adjective and substantive ending -ese: as noiôso, "troublesome"; inglêse, "English"; mêse, "month." But in cortêse, francêse, lucchêse, marchêse, paêse, palêse, the s is like English z.

* Not to be confounded with dis-, tras-: disonôre, trasandare.

d. In the preterites and past participles of chiêdere, chiûdere, nascôndere, pôrre, râdere, riêdere, rimanêre, rispôndere, rôdere, and all verbs in -endere; and in their compounds and derivatives: as chiêsi, socchiuso, nascôse, rispôsero, rasôio, rimase, corrispôsi, rôsero, accêsi, rêso, scêsa. Exceptions to this rule are deridere, verbs in -clûdere, and derivatives of rôdere.

U, unaccented, before a vowel, sounds like English w: as buôno, “good”; guardare, “to look”; può, “he can.”

Z and zz are generally pronounced like a long and vigorous ts: as alzare, “to lift”; aziône, “action”; prêzzo, “price”; zîo, “uncle.”

In the following cases, however, z and zz sound like a prolonged dz:—

a. In azzurro, dozzina, mêzzo, pranzo, ribrêzzo, romanzo, zêlo, and many less common words.

b. In verbs in -izzare (as utilizzare, “to utilize”); except attizzare, dirizzare, guizzare, rizzare, stizzare, and their compounds, and a few uncommon words.

5. The following combinations are to be noted:—

Ch (used only before e and i) is always like English k: as fichi (plural of fico, “fig”). Sch is like sk: as schêrzo, “sport.”

Gh (used only before e and i) is always like English g in “go”: as aghi (plural of ago, “needle”).

Gli (written gl if the following vowel be i) is nearly like English lli in “million”: as figlio, “son”; figli, “sons.” But in Ânglia, geroglifico, glicerina, negligere and its derivatives, and a few uncommon words borrowed from the Greek or Latin, gl is like English gl.

Gn is nearly like ni in “onion”: as ôgni, “every.”

Qu is always like kw: as quêsto, “this.”

Sc before e and i is nearly like sh in "ship": as uscire, "to go out." Before all other letters it is pronounced sk: as scuôla, "school"; schérno, "contempt."

6. Every letter in Italian is distinctly and separately sounded; the only exceptions are h, silent i (see 4), and the combinations mentioned in 5. Ex.: arte, "art"; firma, "signature"; furto, "theft"; giórno, "day"; vérso, "toward"; andái, "I went"; áura, "breeze"; bugíe, "lies"; Eurôpa, "Europe"; miêi, "my"; paúra, "fear"; sentíi, "I felt"; suôî, "his."

Where a double consonant is written, both letters must be sounded, the first at the end of the preceding, the second at the beginning of the following syllable: as anno, "year"; babbo, "father"; fatto, "done"; mésso, "put"; quéllo, "that." For rr, zz, and soft cc and gg, see 4.

L, m, n, and r, when preceded by an accented vowel and followed by another consonant, are prolonged: as alto (all-to), "high"; sempre (sénmm-pre), "always"; tanto (tann-to), "so much"; parte (parr-te), "part."

7. The accent is nearly always the same as in Latin. In this book it will always be noted. Of the signs written here, students are to use only the grave (`), which is placed on the last syllable of oxytones and on some monosyllables; Italian writers do not agree as to the use of the other marks.

8. Italian words are divided in such a way that, if possible, every syllable shall begin with a consonant: as ta-vo-lí-no, "table"; frat-tán-to, "meanwhile"; al-l' uô-mo, "to the man"; nar-rá-re, "to relate"; mêz-zo, "half"; các-cia, "hunt"; ôg-gi, "to-day."

In the groups s + consonant, consonant + r, cl, fl, gl, pl, and those mentioned in 5, both consonants belong to the following syllable. I = y and u = w go with the following vowel. Ái, áu, ei, eu, oi are not separated. Ex.: al-l'áu-ra, "to the breeze"; a-vrò, "I shall have"; bi-só-gno, "need"; ca-sti-ghi, "punishments"; del-l'ác-qua, "of the water"; in-chiò-stro, "ink"; mièi, "my"; mi-gliò-re, "better"; na-scò-sto, "hidden"; pá-dre, "father"; ri-flét-te-re, "to reflect"; te-á-tro, "theatre"; tuòi, "thy."

PART I.

N.B. — The following twenty lessons furnish, in the form of references to the Grammar, a course of study in the rudiments of Italian. The numbers, which refer to paragraphs, are not supposed to include subdivisions in finer print that are not expressly mentioned. Each lesson is illustrated by an exercise.

LESSON 1.

Pronunciation*: 1; 2; 2, a; 3; 4, including the fine print except s, d; 5; 6; 7; 8. Pronounce all the examples several times.

If I should speak¹ to you of Victor, you would admire his strong, firm will. He was born² in 1749, of a noble family of Piedmont; he is a count. Nowadays³ we don't believe that being noble is enough⁴ to make us worth something; therefore most young men study, and are worth something, because they know that, if they are ignorant, their rank alone will not give them a right to offices and honors. But Victor, as a lad, studied carelessly; and, although he has⁴ a fine mind, he is ignorant, and doesn't know anything at all. We sent him to the Academy of Turin. But he didn't know that talent is of no use without study; and a few years later he came out without having studied nor even travelled, and without knowing that study is worth something. He didn't admire the Academy, and he didn't speak of it; he couldn't study, and he didn't know anything at all, because he thought it was enough to have a fine mind. He was noble, but they didn't give² him offices nor honors, because he was ignorant.

He arrived at the age of twenty-seven, and then, one fine day, he opened his eyes. Now¹ he is thoroughly ashamed of himself, and hopes that by changing his mode of life he will be able to become an entirely different man from what he has been. He has perceived his ignorance, and has resolved to give up the habits that he has formed during a long course of years ; he has determined to accustom himself to study. He says to himself : “ It will not cost much to make good resolutions ; the difficulty will be in keeping them. But I shall keep them — I shall accustom myself to living in an entirely different way from formerly — I shall leave everything in order to study. I resolve to change my mode of life. It will be no small matter, because I have lived hitherto² in an entirely different way ; and when we live in such a way, we form certain customs — but I shall not notice it : by studying and keeping my good resolutions I shall accustom myself to such a life. I will do it. I should like to be a credit to Italy. I perceive my ignorance, and I am ashamed of myself.”

[Based on the third paragraph of Exercise 1.]

Victor knew that he would have to make great efforts, that it wasn't enough to feel a desire to study, and that he would have need of great strength of mind ; but he said¹ to himself that little by little his will would get the upper hand, and that by continuing to study he would come to be a good writer. He understood and perceived what efforts it would cost him ; but he resolved to change his mode of life, and he kept his promise. It is true that it cost him great efforts. He no longer went² out of doors. When he felt a desire to amuse himself instead of studying, he had to have himself tied to his arm-chair. But little by little he became a great poet, and came to have no more need of having himself tied. Then³ he knew that he had got the upper hand, and said¹ to himself: "I shall not resort to this means any longer: I have no more need of it. I shall begin to study, I shall resolve to go on, and I shall keep my promise. I can and will do it. I have changed my way of living. It has been hard — I know what efforts it has cost me; but now⁴ I shall not tie myself any more. I make promises and keep them: my will has got the upper hand."

[From La cartolina postale, by Colómbi.]

Ho venticinque anni, tre mesi e ventidue giorni. Ma, al punto in cui comincia questo racconto, avevo soltanto venticinque anni, tre mesi e quindici giorni. Mi chiamo Cêlso Cêlsi. Un nome che mi fu sempre antipático, perchè fin d'alla mia infanzia, diède l'ôgo ad una quantità di complimenti che non capivo; come ad esêmpio: "Sarai un Cêlso di nome e di fatto," "Speriamo che diventerai un véro Cêlso," ecc., ecc. E confesso che anche a quest' ora non ne capisco di più. Mi sta sempre in cuore il propósito d' andare alla bibliotêca per cercare nell' enciclopedia chi fosse Cêlso, ma non ne ho mai trovato il momento.

EXERCISE 1.

My name has always been¹ Celsus, but I'm not the Celsus whom you know.² What?³ You admit that you don't know⁴ who Celsus is? I've known² him from infancy. Go to the library—look in the encyclopædias. What?³ You haven't had time to? You hate encyclopædias? You have gone to three libraries, and have never found him? It's to be hoped⁵ that you will hunt further; because if⁶ you don't know who Celsus was, you will not understand this story. My uncle,⁷ from the moment he learned⁴ that the true Celsus wrote⁸ an encyclopædia, has always hoped that I should be a Celsus in name and in fact; and he has always meant to give me a library. This intention has given rise to a lot of compliments, such as: "I hope that you, too, will become a Celsus." You will find them in my stories. I'm only twenty-two years old, and I've never written⁸ an encyclopædia, but I should begin even now, if⁶ I had time.

EXERCISE 2.

My parents became acquainted at Viareggio: as soon as they saw each other, they fell in love, and the next autumn they married. Six months later, my father, who had business at Marseilles,¹ was obliged to leave his wife, and go aboard ship at Genoa;² as soon as he had³ arrived, a fever seized him, and the unfortunate⁴ young man never came back. All this my uncle told⁵ me six years⁶ later. This⁶ uncle saw me as a child in my father's house, and he has always⁶ treated me with the tenderness and indulgence of a mother. I have never⁶ been able to comprehend why⁶ he loves me so much,⁷ and even now⁶ I can't understand⁶ it. He had been an officer in the navy. During the summer season he used to return to Viareggio, where⁸ he had made the acquaintance of my mother, and twenty-five⁶ days⁶ later he would leave me and embark for the Adriatic. As far back as he could remember, he couldn't recollect having known his father, who had been killed by the yellow fever at the sea-side. In his childhood⁶ he had had to leave his mother, whom he had never seen again. He had never⁶ married; but⁶ for me he had all the ambition and all the delicate attention of a true⁶ father.

The only relative that I had left¹ was my uncle, a brother of my poor father. As soon as² he heard³ the news of my birth and of the sad death of my mother, he hastened to my nurse, who had been the only witness of the poor widow's death. This nurse was a relative of my uncle's family, and she lavished upon me all the indulgence and all the wealth of affection that a mother could² have shown. She was a widow and had no children.⁴ It was upon me that she bestowed the genuine cordiality and the unrestrained affection which the lack of a family had left inactive in her heart; it is I that enjoy, even² now, the gentle manners and the friendly deference with which she would have treated her own⁵ son.⁴ She is perfectly sure she loves² me like² a mother, and this opinion I have always² shared.⁶ My uncle, as soon as² he heard³ that I had remained with her, hastened at once to find us, and carried us to his house, where² we afterwards became really a part of the family. We should never² have dreamed of getting ourselves a house elsewhere.⁷ For² me my uncle had become a true² father; for² Assunta⁸ (this is the name² of the nurse) he had become a brother. He was always² in the habit of treating us as² if² we were in our own house.

EXERCISE 4.

When I had completed six¹ years, I entered school, where¹ I began¹ at once¹ the study of science. My uncle, who was well acquainted with² literature, had read a great many modern stories, and knew several of them¹ by heart; so he had formed certain very definite opinions about modern stories and novels, and he wasn't willing³ that I should read them. That is why he had⁴ me enter a technical school. My recollections of school coincide with those of my punishments. It seemed, taking everything into consideration, that I had a certain talent, a certain aptitude for study, but no interest in the sciences. My lessons in⁵ history I recited⁶ very well, with the help of the more¹ diligent⁹ pupils¹⁰; but the lessons in⁵ science I always¹ hated,¹ and I failed in them, without the help of anybody. I read Ariosto and several modern novels, but I didn't read enough to have a personal opinion about our literature, which I was hardly¹ acquainted with.² I wrote letters in secret, and spoiled a great many postal cards. I used to make⁴ caricatures of the pupils.¹⁰ The teachers never¹ thought¹ of making me behave: they didn't promise me any⁷ degrees nor certificates. I never¹ obtained⁸ a prize of any kind. So when they suggested to me, three¹ years later,¹ that I should leave the school, my uncle consented without remonstrance.

EXERCISE 5.

As soon as¹ my not very turbulent youth had evaporated, I obtained¹ a position, and entered a small post¹ office, where I spent eight years, from 1867 to 1875. I used to go to the office at seven o'clock in the morning, I stayed¹ there¹ all the day, and would go home again at four to see¹ my uncle and join in the conversation between him and Assunta. We regularly took² our dinners³ together. The next¹ day I would return to the office at ten, to go home once more at six. Thus¹ may¹ be summed up all the events of my calm and monotonous life. But that life had always¹ seemed pleasant to me: I loved¹ the sea and the hills of Spezia, and the family hearth was very⁴ dear⁵ to me. But in 1875, having realized that I had kept up my apprenticeship eight years without relaxing my duties, I thought¹ that I ought¹ to have obtained¹ a promotion, and although⁶ my uncle wasn't willing¹ to give his opinion on this¹ subject, I decided⁷ to go to Milan to ask for the reward¹ of my diligence. So¹ I left my home, and came to the city, where I asked for a small increase of salary. The increase I soon obtained¹; but I was not happy⁸: I had been driven far from my family, and the restless life of Milan was very⁴ distasteful¹ to me. No more calm sea, no more pleasant youth — the November of my life had arrived !

EXERCISE 6.

Have you ever gone¹ to Milan? Have you ever experienced the sorrow of leaving¹ your home ; of waking up in a furnished room, where¹ you hear² only the mechanical jingle of your alarm clock, and where¹ you see¹ nothing but your fireless hearth ; of waiting for the loved¹ faces which you will never see¹ ; of dining alone, without joy, without excitement, in a lonely³ eating-house, where¹ all¹ your emotions die away in your heart for want of expression ; of setting out at seven,¹ never accompanied, to go¹ to the café or¹ to the theatre, and of returning¹ alone at ten,¹ to come back into your little,¹ deserted⁴ room, cold and sad¹ as your solitary³ life ; of passing all¹ your days⁵ at the office, where¹ you know nobody, neither the proprietor⁶ nor the other clerks,⁷ and where¹ no one ever lifts a hand to help you? If¹ you have

For him who has no company, Christmas is the saddest¹ day of the year.¹ The others are merry — he would like¹ to be happy,¹ too; but he cannot: he feels¹ only¹ the sadness¹ of a lonely¹ life,¹ and he mourns over it. And yet Christmas, even for us, does not lack joys—it has so many and such great¹ ones; but¹ they die away¹ in our hearts for want¹ of expression.¹ This is very sad,¹ but¹ what can we do? That festival, that happiness,¹ do not belong to us: they belong to him who has not left¹ his home—to him who has never¹ gone to enter the restless¹ life¹ of great¹ cities.¹ All this I felt and said¹ to myself that day; and I began to weep. Had I not a right to feel injured? I began a sonnet, in which I wished¹ to express² all the sorrow¹ that I felt¹; but I could not finish it—I could not put into the fourteen verses all the emotions¹ of that morning.¹ And yet for my uncle and Assunta that day was merrier than any other Christmas had ever been. The workmen, men and children, went in a body to the shop, and offered my uncle a turkey and a basket of oysters that the secretaries had sent him; and my uncle made a speech in which he expressed² the joy and the affection that he felt.

EXERCISE 8.

The New Year's Day of 1874 was cold enough for all those who went out of doors that morning to remember it. Several thousand men,¹ or rather fools, had interrupted their sleep and gone off² to repeat their names and offer¹ their visiting cards to one another, as if they didn't see one another often³ enough the other days of the year. But¹ as soon as¹ they had⁴ gone out, they were seized by the cold, which had been waiting for them all the morning: they shivered in all their limbs; their teeth chattered; they ran to warm themselves, and while⁴ running they froze their noses. The greater part of them returned¹ home, and the others grumbled to themselves: “Shall we have to run all day? Never in all our lives has it been our lot to feel¹ such a cold. Let's warm ourselves—but¹ how? We have tired ourselves out running all the morning. Let's go back¹ to our offices.” Then¹ they separated,¹ according to their occupations, and each one went away² grumbling to his house or to his office, to read the names in his letters—for most of the envelopes contained nothing but a name and an address. When¹ I wound up my watch and went out,⁴ at seven, I didn't see anybody left.⁵

EXERCISE 9.

That day it was my lot to send several¹ letters, to wish my uncle¹ and the others¹ a happy² new year.¹ These³ letters have to be written every year: they give extra trouble to those who send them and to those who read¹ them. The latter³ always¹ say to themselves, crossly: "Who has sent me this³ heap of letters? This³ is too much! Why do these people send me their visiting cards, as if¹ I had forgotten their names?¹ I should like¹ to forget their very existence! They are so many fools¹—I shall even come to think¹ that they are so many personal enemies of mine. Do they imagine that I want¹ to read¹ all¹ those letters? Couldn't¹ they send a postal card? In this way they could have satisfied their desire to write, and I could have read twenty names¹ and addresses¹ instead of two. They send me letters on purpose, so that I shall have to tear open⁴ the envelopes.¹ They do it merely to annoy me. I will¹ open⁴ that yellow envelope¹ that is peeping out from under the pile; and then⁵ I shall not¹ read¹ another letter!" And so saying, they begin¹ to read.¹ I, too, had, that year, letters of every kind, visiting cards, and also⁵ a postal card—the first that I had happened to receive.⁶

When¹ we returned,¹ we noticed that there was a whole pyramid of letters, visiting cards,¹ and postal cards, which awaited¹ us at the office,¹ and seemed to say to us: “We have come to give you more¹ bother.¹ Read¹ us!” “Shall we have to read¹ all this?” we grumbled. “We can’t¹ do it—it would give us too much to do. Why¹ do they write² letters¹ to people like us? Yet we can’t¹ put all the heap¹ out of doors; on the contrary, we must¹ open¹ all the envelopes.¹ So far as they contain¹ only¹ visiting cards,¹ they will not give us too much trouble.¹ Everything has an end. EXERCISE II.¹

The warden told me that they had delivered to him, on Friday, the 20th of October, the notary whom they had arrested at three in the afternoon ; that the latter, who² had been put through a long examination, had handed him his watch and money, thinking he would have them given back to him in due season ; that he had eaten at eight in the evening, and that in less than half an hour, having shut the window, he had gone to bed. They had wished him good night, but he hadn't said anything. "You say he delivered his money and watch to you," I said ; "did he have anything else in his pockets?" "He had nothing." "What time³ is it?" "It's nine." In less than three hours I had had myself conducted by the warden to the room intended for us.

Yesterday¹ I waved my handkerchief more than half an hour,¹ but you didn't look at me. Every time that I see³ you again, I shall repeat my greetings. When¹ I think that you don't recognize me, I am sick at heart. Have they forbidden you to answer me ? Look at me often in the future ; I'll look at you ; and in this way I'll tell you many things, and you will reply to them. Looking at each other every day¹ will cheer us. When¹ I was alone¹ in the prison, I often said to myself : ' What a comfort the sight of any honest man must be ! ' And now¹ you have come, and we shall be happy.¹ "

EXERCISE 15.

The next day¹ they came to tell me that my father, having heard of my arrest, had come to see me ; and they made me follow them below, thinking that this¹ visit must¹ give me pleasure. My poor father, whom my arrest had indescribably excited, was awaiting¹ me in the office. As soon as¹ he saw me, he put on an expression of forced serenity, and, when he thought he had sufficiently prepared himself, he spoke to me with studied cheerfulness : "Calm yourself, Silvio ; you have nothing to fear. They have arrested¹ you for some¹ ridiculous² suspicions — but they are things¹ of no importance. I am not so rash as to hope that you will get out in¹ two¹ or¹ three¹ days¹ ; but you will soon be set free¹ — in short, your imprisonment will not last a month.¹ When I heard of your examination," he said to me, mysteriously, "I came here¹ to urge the government to liberate you. It seems to me I have persuaded the emperor³ that you have done nothing to expose you to the severity of the law ; and I hope that he will soon vouchsafe to save¹ you from prison.¹"

PART III.

N.B. — The words contained in the following exercises are to be found in the English-Italian vocabulary.

EXERCISE I.

[Adapted from Panfôrte di Siêna, by W. D. Howells.]

Siena, more than any¹ other Italian city, was afflicted with² municipal rivalries, with² domestic quarrels. Now the nobles³ triumphed, wresting the power from⁴ the commons; now the people took a bloody revenge, and drove from the city every patrician. Every change of government was⁵ accompanied by ostracism, by violence, by public tumults, by continual uprisings. And these hostilities between families, between parties, and between classes were⁵ sustained and perpetuated by the rival ambitions of the popes and emperors. From the beginning, Siena had been Ghibelline; and it is odd that one of her proudest victories should have been that obtained against Henry, son of Barbarossa. When that emperor threatened the free cities with⁶ ruin, Siena was the only Tuscan town that closed its doors against⁴ him; and when Henry besieged it, the inhabitants, making a sally from the gates of Fontebranda and San Marco, fell upon the Germans, and put them to⁷ rout.

⁶ 'Of.' ⁷ 'Into.'

EXERCISE 2.

The Florentines, as we have said,¹ followed the party of the pope, or rather of their own liberty, which they believed was upheld by the papal policy; and the Sienese desired their independence, too,² but they thought to obtain it by means of the emperor. The two peoples could never unite³ in their common love of liberty, but continued for four centuries their unhappy wars, until they were both reduced to⁴ slavery. Siena had a shameful triumph when, in the great siege of 1530, she helped to make Florence return under the rule of the Medici; and Florence took a cruel revenge when her tyrant Cosimo I entered Siena, fifteen years afterward, at the⁵ head of the imperial forces. The Florentines, in 1260, were⁶ for the first time completely defeated by the Sienese and by their own Ghibelline exiles at Montaperto, distant twelve miles from Siena; and the slaughter was so terrible that, as Dante says, “féce l’Árbia coloráta in rósso.” In 1269, again,⁷ the Sienese were conquered by their own Guelph exiles and by the Florentines at Colle di Val d’ Elsa.

EXERCISE 3.

They relate an anecdote of a Sienese official to whom the Florentines applied in 1860, that¹ he might invite his fellow-citizens to take part in² the festivity which celebrated the union of Tuscany with the kingdom of Italy. He answered “yes,³” and said⁴ that he would gladly send a deputation of Sienese to Florence; but would the Florentines really like to have them come⁵? — “Certainly! Why not⁶?” — “Why, that affair of Montaperto, you know!” As if the thing had happened the year before, or as if the recollection of that battle must still, after six centuries, arouse the wrath of the Florentines. But perhaps those six hundred years had confused the memory of that and of so many other grievances; or perhaps the Florentines of 1860 believed themselves sufficiently avenged by their victory of 1269.

¹ Perchè. ² ‘To.’ ³ ‘Of yes.’ ⁴ Omit. ⁵ ‘Would it then really please the Florentines that they should come?’ ⁶ No.

EXERCISE 4.

This victory was the ¹ cause of the triumph of the Guelphs in Siena, and, finally, of the substitution of ² a magistracy of the Nine for ² that of the Thirty. The Nine, or ³ Noveschi, governed the city for 250 years with a tyranny and with a corruption so infamous that they succeeded in ⁴ destroying every generous sentiment, in overthrowing the noble pride of the Sienese people, and, if not in extinguishing, at least in cooling its ardent love of liberty, and in preparing it, in short, for ⁵ the government, always hated, of one man alone. Such a government reappeared in 1487 in the person of Pandolfo Petrucci, who tyrannized over ¹ Siena for twenty-five years, playing ⁶ there, with less cunning and with greater ferocity, the part that Lorenzo de' Medici had played ⁶ a century before in Florence, which ¹ had ¹ grown corrupt more quickly.

¹ Omit. ² 'Of the substituting a . . . to that. . . .' ³ Ovvéro. ⁴ 'It succeeded to them to (di).'

EXERCISE 5.

Petrucci, like Lorenzo, was called "the Magnificent," and passed his life, too, ¹ amid orgies and debauches, amid the representatives of the arts, of letters, and of religion, and amid political intrigues which always ended with bloody reprisals and revenges. He embellished the city, of course, building palaces, churches, and convents with the money that he stole from ² the people, procuring peace for it in order to acquire riches. He, too, ¹ dying calmly of his sins and excesses, surrendered his soul steeped in ³ treasons and in ³ murders, like that of the amiable Lorenzo; and his sons wished to succeed him, ⁴ as Lorenzo's did, ⁵ but, like Pietro de' Medici, they were deposed and banished. One member of his pleasing family was that Achille Petrucci, who, in the massacre of St. Bartholomew at Paris, cut the throat of ² the great Protestant admiral, Coligny.

EXERCISE 6.

Being liberated from these¹ tyrants, the Sienese enjoyed a freedom which, within the city, was stormy and intermittent, while without they enjoyed the various chances of war, until the emperor, Charles V, having subjugated Florence, sent to Siena a Spanish garrison, with orders² to build a fort there. The Spaniards were commanded by Don Hurtado de Mendoza, who was not only, as history describes him, a³ profound dissembler, astute, sly, with⁴ insinuating manners, but also the³ author of the History of the War of Granada and of one of the most attractive books in⁴ the world, The Life of Lazarillo de Tormes, Spanish Rogue and Beggar, for the³ sake of which I gladly forgive Don Hurtado for³ his sins against Siena; and this clemency is made easier for me by the knowledge that⁵ the Sienese demolished his fort without delay, and drove him and his Spaniards from the city.

EXERCISE 7.

The Sienese had now¹ regained their freedom, but they could not hope to maintain it without the help of the French and of their allies, the Florentine exiles, who, under the Strozzi, were conspiring against the Medici. The friendship of the French bore nothing but promises, the exiles were few and weak, and in 1554 the troops of the emperor and of Duke Cosimo — that prince famous for his terrible aspect and for his bloodthirsty soul, murderer of his son, and father of a family of homicides — came to besiege the unhappy city. The siege lasted eighteen months, until the Sienese were reduced² by hunger and by pestilence, and until the women were obliged to fight beside the men for that city which was their fatherland and the last hope of Italian liberty.

² Insert 'to the extremes.'

EXERCISE 8.

When the famine¹ began, they banished the "useless mouths," the old men and the old women and the orphans, hoping that the enemy would have pity on² these³ unfortunate creatures; but the Spaniards butchered the greater part of them before⁴ their eyes. Fifteen hundred peasants, who tried to carry food into the city, were hanged upon the trees before the walls, which trees, as a Spanish writer¹ says, "seemed to bring forth⁵ corpses." The country round about⁶ was laid waste; there perished a hundred thousand inhabitants, and the fields that were formerly tilled became pestilential swamps, which breathed forth fever and death. The inhabitants of the city were reduced from forty to six thousand; seven hundred families preferred banishment to slavery.

¹ Put the subject after the verb. ² 'Of.' ³ 'Those.' ⁴ 'Under.' ⁵ Imperfect subjunctive. ⁶ 'In the environs.'

EXERCISE 9.

[Newspaper paragraph.]

Every day the danger¹ of electric wires is made² evident. The latest account comes from New York, where, during the night of Monday last,³ the following⁴ series¹ of accidents happened. A run-away horse broke a pole of the electric wire on⁵ Fifth Avenue, so that the wire lay along the street. A second horse put his foot on this wire: a purple flash¹ was seen,² a report¹ was heard,² the lights on⁵ the Avenue went out,⁶ and the horse lay⁷ dead. All this occurred in an instant. Another horse put his foot on the wire, and he, too, fell⁷ dead. Fortunately, as some one quickly shut off⁸ the dangerous part of the Avenue, the lives of other horses and perhaps even of men were saved. But imagine² the consequences if the accident had happened at noon near the Post Office, or at⁵ night near a great theatre, while the crowd was going in or coming out. There is only one way of preventing the losses of lives and of property that the electric wires¹ cause : to put them where they will do the least harm — under ground.

⁵ 'Of.' ⁶ 'Extinguished themselves.' ⁷ 'Remained.' ⁸ 'Some one quickly shutting.'

EXERCISE 10.

[Newspaper paragraph.]

The exercises which took¹ place last Thursday afternoon² in Music Hall³ were a fitting tribute to the memory of the great general. Mr. Beecher's eulogy — which will remain forever as a⁴ masterpiece both of literary beauty and of analytical power and kindly criticism — was pronounced without any oratorical display; in fact, it was read, and, at least in great part, it was read so low that the spectators, except those who sat near the platform, hardly heard it, and many heard nothing. The numerous audience remained there, however, all the time that the oration⁵ lasted; those who heard all or a part considered themselves surely repaid more than liberally for⁶ the little inconvenience that they suffered, while those who heard little or nothing did not seem on that account⁷ any⁴ more disposed to⁸ lose the possibility of catching a few⁹ words by-and-by.

¹ 'Had.' ² 'In the afternoon hours of the Thursday past.' ³ 'The Hall of Music.' ⁴ Omit. ⁵ Put the subject after the verb. ⁶ 'Of.' ⁷ 'For this.'
⁸ A. ⁹ Quidliche.

EXERCISE II.

[Adapted from Henry Ward Beecher's eulogy of General Grant.]

Another¹ name is added² to the roll of those whom the world unwillingly lets die. A few years since, however, that man's heaven was darkened by clouds, and obloquy, calumny, and bitter lies rained down upon his head. But now the clouds are all blown away : under a serene sky the hero surrendered his soul to the Creator, and the nation wept. The path that leads to his tomb is worn² beneath the steps of innumerable pilgrims. The black lips of slander are silent, and even criticism hesitates, fearing that some incautious word³ may mar the history of the modest, gentle, magnanimous warrior. The whole nation watched him with unfeigned sympathy while he passed through humiliating misfortunes, and the whole world sighed when his life⁴ ended. At his burial the unsworded hands of those whom he had fought lifted the bier and carried the body to the tomb with love and with reverence.

EXERCISE 12.

[See Formulas used in Letter-Writing.]

Rome, January 25, 1891.

Dear Mr. Rossi,

Although you have not yet replied to my last letter, sent from Paris, I hope that you will not be sorry¹ to² have some news of me before I leave Italy. We arrived at Rome about the end of September, and had the good fortune to³ find at once a boarding-house that suited us, with regard both to convenience and to the opportunity for³ practising⁴ the language of the country — a⁵ very hard thing to³ obtain in this city. It is true that the greater part of the boarders speak only English; but there is always a little Italian conversation at the head of the table, and in⁵ the evening, too,⁶ there are often Italian visitors, who are kind enough⁷ to³ interest themselves in⁸ our progress in the use of the language. We shall probably start for Spain in a few days; and, as the boats are not going any⁵ more, we shall have⁹ to⁵ go by rail,¹⁰ by the way of Genoa, Marseilles, and Barcelona. We expect to remain three months at Seville, and afterwards we shall return to Paris. I hope that your occupations will leave you, before long,¹¹ a moment free to¹² write me a few¹³ lines. Meanwhile, begging you to accept for yourself¹⁴ and for your esteemed family my brother's regards and my own,⁵ I remain¹⁵

Yours truly,¹⁶

Henry Smith.

¹ 'It will not displease you.' ² 'The.' ⁸ Di. ⁴ 'Exercising ourselves in.'

⁵ Omit. ⁶ Pôî. ⁷ 'Have the kindness.' ⁸ 'To.' ⁹ 'It will be necessary.'

¹⁰ 'With the railroad.' ¹¹ Fra poco. ¹² Per. ¹³ Qualche. ¹⁴ 'You.'

¹⁵ Mi è grâto di dirmi. ¹⁶ Suo devotissimo.

EXERCISE 13.

[Adapted from The Bostonians, by Henry James.]

Ransom, who stood on the threshold of the parlor door, was looking everywhere, in the hope of finding Verena; but she¹ seemed to be keeping² herself hidden. Suddenly he felt himself tapped³ on the back, and, turning around, he saw Mrs. Luna, who had given him a rap with her fan. "Your unwillingness⁴ to speak to me in my own house⁵—I am almost used to that⁶; but if⁷ you mean also to avoid me in society, you ought at least to warn me beforehand." Ransom, who was acquainted with such wiles on the⁸ part of Mrs. Luna, knew also what to think of them⁹; hence he had time¹⁰ to observe that she was dressed in¹¹ yellow, and that she seemed plump and very gay. He could not help admiring the unerring instinct with which she had taken¹² him unawares; for having seen nobody in the anteroom, and having come in there from the opposite side, she had found it easy¹³ to have the field free for her operations.

¹² Usc cògliere. ¹³ 'It had been easy for her.'

EXERCISE 14.

He offered to find her a place¹ where it would be possible to see and hear Miss Tarrant, and he even proposed to her to bring her a chair on which she could stand up, if she wished to look over the heads of the gentlemen gathered in front of the door; but to these offers she² replied with the question: "Do you suppose that I came³ here for that little chatterbox? Haven't I already told you what I think of her?" "At any rate, you can't have come⁴ for me," said Ransom, guessing what she was driving at,⁵ "because you couldn't know whether I was coming or not." "I guessed³ it—something told³ me so," pursued Mrs. Luna, gazing at him with a searching and accusing look. "I know⁶ why you⁷ have come," she added in a moment. "You never told³ me that you were acquainted with Mrs. Burrage." "I'm not acquainted with her at all—before receiving her invitation I hadn't even heard of her.⁸" "Then⁹ why in the world¹⁰ did she send³ you⁶ this invitation?"

¹ Posto. ² Put 'she' before 'to.' ³ Perfect. ⁴ 'You will not have come.'
⁵ 'What she would have wished to say.' ⁶ Insert 'it.' ⁷ Put 'you' after 'come.' ⁸ 'I hadn't even heard speak of her (ne).'
⁹ Oh allóra. ¹⁰ Mdi.

EXERCISE 15.

Ransom had spoken too quickly, and perceived at once that for several reasons it would have been better not to answer in that way. But in an instant he made up for his mistake. "Your sister," he said, "has¹ perhaps had the kindness to ask for a card for me." "My sister? What are you thinking of²! I know how Olive loves you³! Mr. Ransom, you are a great fraud." In the meantime she had drawn him little by little into⁴ the middle of the room, where they could not be heard by the persons who were staying at the door, and Ransom saw that if he let her⁵ do her will, she was going to provide for herself⁶ a little entertainment in the anteroom, in opposition⁷ to Miss Tarrant's address. "Please⁸!" resumed Mrs. Luna. "Come and⁹ sit down here just a moment; in this place¹⁰ we shall not be disturbed. I have something of great importance to¹¹ tell you.¹²"

- ¹ 'Will have.' ² Ma che Le pare! ³ 'I know (lo so io) the good that wishes you the Olive!' ⁴ Fino in. ⁵ Le. ⁶ A sè stéssa. ⁷ 'Making thus opposition.' ⁸ 'Do me the pleasure!' ⁹ 'To.' ¹⁰ Pòsto. ¹¹ Da. ¹² Put 'to tell you' before 'something.'
